history

Bhuchung Sonam was born the son of land owning farmers near Amdo. He was the third child and was sent to a Kagyupa monastery when he was five. He was a boisterous, aesthetic child who liked to play and fight. Only the dobdob's whips kept him from becoming a bully. As he became a teen he did poorly at scholarly studies but he excelled at the yogas.

Bhuchungs teachers have found that his awareness of his own body is a tremendous advantage in his yogic studies, although they worry that arrogance over his own body is a problem he will have to overcome on his path towards enlightenment. Bhuchung acknowledges that his teachers are probably correct, though it is not something he worries about much.

motivations

A loyal servant of his monastery, Bhuchung fearlessly volunteers for dangerous assignments, including carrying messages through Chinese controlled territories. He enjoys traveling for the dangers, challenges and new things to see.

methods

Bhuchung can travel quickly (Running Yoga), in the coldest weather (Fire Yoga) with little fear of being bothered by malevolent spirits (Protective Mantra). When forced to fight, he uses his Tai Chi skills to incapacitate enemies.
